Associate Spotlight:

Dr. Jane Przybysz

Dr. Jane Przybysz was raised an Army brat. She was born in Ft. Bragg, NC. Lived in NYC for 17 years, this is where she feels her ‘hometown’ is. She has also lived in San Jose, CA for 13 years. Jane received her B.A. in English with a minor in Art History from Emory University. She then went on to receive her Masters in Theater Directing from the Teachers College of Columbia University. Her PH.D comes from New York University in Performance Studies. She is also a graduate of the Community Leadership of San Jose and received her Non-Profit Arts Management Certificate from National Arts Strategies from the School of Social Innovation, Stanford Business School.

She has lived on both the east and west coast, but while living in NYC as a grad student she lead bicycle trips for the American Youth Hostels, which allowed her to take (free) vacations. This is also not her first time here at USC. Jane came here in the mid 90s for a one-year research position to study the networks of organizations and individuals that promoted the revival of craft in the southeastern United States from 1880-1940. She has since returned and has been here for two years. She has been a Preston Associate since her return.

Today, her research includes: performance art, the history of women and performance, gender theory, textiles as performance art, the dynamic relationship between so-called “folk” and “fine” arts trans-nationally and trans-historically.

Jane’s life isn’t all work and research. She took her interests to the stage Thursday evening, April 4th, and preformed Murderers on the Cumberland Plateau “the only Civil War song I know written from the perspective of a woman—as part of One Columbia’s April arts month kick off. I’ll be performing this ballad with Wilford Wells & the Blue Ridge Mountain Grass.”
